I guess I need to "activate" it but I am not sure which one of the files do I have to load. The man in the bottom right corner of the screen says its user loading. But I cant get to that part. So would you be so kind to help me with that? I have a really annoying auto bootup. I want to stop that. I have no idea which file do I need to load to do that.) So if anybody knows that then help me! I have contacted them by mail and they have replied that they will send a CD asap. For some reason my mail just wont open. Im not a spammer or anything (or so I thought). But now I'm really confused as to which file I need to load. Thanks for the reply. But I havent even gotten to the loading part. I just cant get the card to read. At all. Its like there is no drivers at all. But this is a new card. I just downloaded it today. On the dark side of the moon, there's a pirate ship, picking up some souls to sell. If you were on that ship, and could snatch a single soul, what would it be? Do you have the newest drivers for the card? For me, it says 696 when I start the install...so it will either be the 696 or 680...I recommend you download the 696. I have and it works like a charm. Would the card work for win xp if it was for a laptop or any other device? I was thinking maybe a laptop. But in your opinion, is the driver I am referring to the most recent version? Make sure you have a good computer and thats about it. i tested it with an Acer Aspire 1515 which has a NVIDIA geforce 6200 graphic card and it worked fine. Download the latest drivers from NVIDIA and put it in your CD tray. start your computer and load the installer. OK, I downloaded the latest drivers from NVIDIA and started the install. I have a 3 gigabyte DVD and it gets down to 100 megabytes and stops. Wierd that. So I just started and is that normal for the installation to stop so early? 82157476af
