!!!! Samantha looked up at Janie. Janie couldn't help but smile. Janie could tell from Samantha's facial expression that she was waiting to hear what she had to say, and Janie had no idea what that was going to be. Samantha read it once more. When she finished reading the final paragraph, she read it again. "Well, what do you think?" Janie looked up at Samantha and smiled. "I think it's awesome!" Samantha was obviously impressed. "It's so simple, yet so meaningful." Janie gave her sister a hug. "I knew it was going to be good! It's so cute!" Sam said as she looked at her mom. Samantha could tell from the look on her mom's face that her mom wasn't crazy about her saying that, but Janie still didn't seem to mind. "My mom is going to read it this weekend, but I really think it's going to help with my freshman year." Janie said as she smiled. "Oh no, this is going to be good!" Samantha said. "I'm so excited for you, Janie! I know that this summer is going to be a tough one, and I'm really happy that you have something to look forward to." Sam looked at her sister. "Maybe we should start planning something? You know, when you get back." Samantha said. "I'm already doing it. I was planning on doing a class trip, but I'm also thinking of doing something here. There's the beach, and some of our favorite places are right in Newburyport." Janie said. "What do you think, Mom?" Samantha asked. "I don't mind." Samantha's mom said as she looked at her daughters. "If it's something that the two of you would be interested in, I have no problem with it." Janie and Samantha thanked their mom, and started planning. The next day, Samantha walked to the campus. She was a little nervous, but she was also excited. She was really looking forward to seeing her boyfriend, but she also wanted to do something 82157476af
